

A liquid crystal panel that includes an array substrate fabricated using four mask process, wherein a passivation layer in a seal pattern forming region between a display area and a non-display area is removed during a photolithography mask step for simultaneous patterning an active layer and a passivation layer to maintain a cell gap